The Characteristics and Nature of the Sino-US Relationship in the New Era—Also on the Diplomatic Blunders of the Late Soviet Union and the Mistakes of the Current “New Cold War” Concept Zhang Wenmu (4)

After the Second World War, the United States turned from a nation-state that had been oppressed by Europe to a semi-colonial country that was oppressed and exploited by an international consortium, namely, the Wall Street. The US government today has switched its political basis from oil dollar to arms dollar and has turned itself into a warlike government. The goals of American diplomacy are back on the track of war again. In the new era, the nature of the competition between China and the United States is that of systems. With international capital gains shrinking sharply, unreasonable US demands against China is approaching China’s bottom line. Compared with the second half of the 20th century and the beginning of the 21st century, the power relationship between China and the United States has undergone major changes that are favorable to China. However, there is no fundamental change in its nature yet. Although China’s overall defensive diplomacy has not changed, even though China still has the need and opportunity to attack on certain issues. Under such circumstances, we must grasp the main contradictions in the international community and the laws of international struggle, scientifically study the international situation, and draw lessons from the collapse of the Soviet Union. We must learn from Mao Zedong’s art of struggle, adopt a policy of local attacks in overall defense, and give priority to accelerating reunification of the two sides of the Taiwan Strait.

Five Great Leaps: Political Advantages of Socialism with Chinese Characteristics for a New Era Xin Xiangyang (13)

Socialism with Chinese characteristics has entered a new era, which will not only have an increasing impact on the world economy, but also contribute the Chinese wisdom to the progress and development of human political civilization. Having achieved “five great leaps”, socialism politics with Chinese characteristics for a new era has avoided five major political risks: the disruption in power transfer and “sworn brotherhood politics”; the fallacy of single vote politics and “finger politics”; the ethnic issue of populist politics and “street politics”; the interests of multi-party politics and “boxing politics”; the specter of irrational politics and “nonsensical politics”.

Capitalism in Crisis and China's Response—Samir Amin on the Significance of Marx's Theory Today

..... [Egypt] Samir Amin, Translated by Li Jiangjing (51)

Marx revealed the basic contradictions of capitalist society during the rise of capitalism and pointed out that capitalism is only a short transitional period in human history. Contemporary capitalism is in its second systemic crisis. With increasing concentration of capital, imperialism has undergone a qualitative change. The three giants of the United States, Japan and Europe have formed a collective imperialism. Their goal is to turn China into a subordinate country that supplies them with raw materials. Therefore, China should not be naive and repeat the mistakes of the Soviet Union. China should be soberly aware that even if China became a capitalist country, the collective imperialism would not allow China to rise peacefully. Now, we should consider establishing a world organization of working-class all over the world like the International Workingmen's Association, the Second International and the Comintern to carry out a common strategy and seek common victories. Marx's theory is increasingly shining the light of truth in contemporary times; communism is not utopia, and today's ideal will become tomorrow's reality.

Proletarianization of the Teachers and the Rise of New Strike Waves in the United States

..... [US] Steve Fraser, Translated by Hu Xiaoxue (57)

Since April this year, strikes of American teachers have come one after another, which have formed strike waves. Their root causes are years of economic austerity and a sharp reduction in investment in education in the United States. The teachers' living expenses are beyond their means, and the children's education is greatly affected. As a result, the teachers' strikes have been widely supported by the American people. However, the US authorities have been blaming the teachers for the social crisis and try to scapegoat them. The author believes that teachers are part of American working class and are proletarians without any power. The American working class has a long revolutionary history of strikes and uprisings, and it has ever dealt a heavy blow to those in power. The American teachers strike waves are a new manifestation of American labor movement, which will definitely have a major impact on the future social life of the United States.

A Preliminary Study of the Workers' Party (Turkey) Li Yunpeng (62)

The climax of socialist movement in Turkey took place in the 1960s and 1970s, and one of its leading core was the Workers' Party (Turkey). The party, mainly through parliamentary struggle and worker and student movements, has made an indelible historical contribution in protecting the interests of workers, promoting the process of social democracy and legalization of Turkey, and safeguarding Turkey's independence and sovereignty. The idea of "United National Democratic Front," which was put forward by the party, still has an influence on left-wing political parties in Turkey. However, due to its subjective historical limitations and the severe objective situation, the party failed to lead the proletariat to seize power. The rise and fall of the Workers' Party (Turkey) provides an experience for reflections on the "Turkish model" for the development of socialist movement in the third world countries.

The Philosophical Logic of Lenin's Imperialism and Its Contemporary Value Jia Shupin and Hu Feixia (71)

Although Lenin's Imperialism has been published for more than one hundred years, its philosophical logic and contemporary value still shine the light of truth. First, some people think that Lenin's Imperialism has encountered "the dilemma of the times,” which is actually an error of judgment on the development of contemporary capitalism. Second, the philosophical logic of Imperialism has uncovered the reason of questioning it as “the dilemma of the times” has unveiled the essence of imperialism, has explained the development trend of imperialism and its transformation, and has realized the concrete and historical unity of cognition and practice, theory and reality. Third, Imperialism still shows its value in the times today under new historical conditions. It sets an example for us to inherit and develop Marxism and provides methodological enlightenment for us to correctly understand the new changes of contemporary capitalism. It has practical guiding significance to socialist country’s reform, opening-up and modernization.

Copyright of Red Works Should Be Protected through Special Legislation—Comments on the Copyright Infringement Case of Liang Xin vs. The National Ballet of China Chi Fangxu and Zhang Xinxin (77)

“The Red Detachment of Women” is different from ordinary dance works, because it concerns the public interests. The case of “The Red Detachment of Women” reflects an important issue, that is, how to protect the copyright of “red works” under the rule of law. First, the case of “The Red Detachment of Women” shows that there are some major legislative deficiencies in protecting the copyright of “red works” and there is a serious legislative insufficiency in the current copyright law. Second, copyright protection of the “red works” through special legislation is related not only to public interests, but also to the long-term stability of state power. Third, the key to protect the copyright of “red works” by legislation is to establish a national system of “red works” copyright ownership.

Copyright Lawsuit over the Ballet of “The Red Detachment of Women” and Legal Protection of the Assets of Red Culture Zhao Xiaolu (82)

The copyright dispute over the ballet of “The Red Detachment of Women Army” has raised an important theoretical problem as well as a problem of legal practice. First, in China, a classic of red culture is usually adapted from another original works of still earlier time, which gives rise to the problem of copyright ownership. Second, before the reform and opening-up, writers and artists were all state cadres who received salaries from the government, which leads to the copyright ownership problem concerning the works completed as part of one’s employment. Third, the copyright of written and dance works are two interconnected but different legal concepts. Therefore, the copyright of dance works cannot be covered or replaced by that of written works. Fourth, classics of red cultural works have not only economic and cultural functions, but also political functions, and they are state-owned intangible assets with red, historical characteristics. To keep capital from controlling the lifeblood of red culture, special protection of the copyright of red cultural works is required.
